I AGAIN DEDICATE THIS BOOK TO THE
BISHOPS AND PRIESTS OF IRELAND, WHO ONCE MORE AND
WITH NO NIGGARD HAND
HAVE HELPED ME
TO CARRY OUT MY UNDERTAKING.

INTRODUCTION.

THE first edition of this work, which was published in 1904, did not go far enough in the direction I had intended, and the great mass of material collected by me during twenty years, at a cost of about £2,500, could not be fully utilized, owing to the fact that I had other onerous duties to perform in connection with the post I held in Paris at the time. Besides this there were financial difficulties, as I did not get anything like the support I anticipated.

The same want of support has followed me in the present undertaking, the magnitude of which may be to some extent estimated when I mention that during my travels through the Irish-speaking districts I had made notes on half a million slips of paper, which had to be arranged, collated, and co-ordinated before I could commence the text, and for each letter of the alphabet a fresh arrangement was necessary. The MS. of the new edition when completed ran to about 5,000 quarto pages. The book itself consists of 1,748 pages, and the printer's bill amounts to £1,200, in addition to £750 spent on compilation and in passing the dictionary through the press.

My great aim has been to supply students of Irish with an exhaustive guide to the various shades of meaning of each word, and, where possible, giving examples of its use drawn from the highest authorities, and also from native speakers who are so lavish in the use of proverbs and wise old saws to drive their meaning home, thus giving a clear insight into the mental attitude of the people, together with some idea of their manners and customs, their character, and their philosophy of life.

In order that nothing should be wanting to secure accuracy I have had the proofs read by various Irish scholars. I am particularly indebted, in this respect, to the late Professor J. C. Ward, of St. Eunan's College, Letterkenny; Rev. Martin O'Donnell, Professor of Irish, St. Jarlath's College, Tuam; Rev. C. Short, Carrickmore, Co. Tyrone; Τὰς Ὁ Δὸννέας (Τόπιν), and Patrick O'Kelly, N.T., who read all the proofs from beginning to end. I am also indebted to Dr. J. P. Henry, Rev. Thomas Boyle, J. P. Hannon, and Rev. Luke Donnellan, who read portion of the proofs. I beg specially to return thanks to Father Donnellan for the loan of the Books and MSS. referred to in the text, and from which I have drawn innumerable illustrative examples.

To those who have so generously helped me by donations I return my very sincere thanks, and especially to His Eminence Cardinal Logue, the Most Rev. Dr. O'Donnell, Bishop of Raphoe; the Rt. Hon. Lord Ashbourne, the Rt. Hon. Lord O'Neill, Rt. Hon. Sir Henry Bellingham, Bart.; Mr. William O'Brien, M.P., Mr. C. R. Cooke-Taylor, Mr. W. J. Robertson, Manchester; Rev. C. Short, Lieut.-Col. Sir W. Hutcheson Poë, Mr. Æneas O'Neill, Right Rev. Maurus O'Phelan, Lord Abbot of Mount Melleray; Very Rev.

Wm. Delany, S.J.; Mr. R. S. Lepper, M.A., L.L.M., Carnalea, Co. Down, and Miss Mary A. Hollingworth.

I beg also to acknowledge my indebtedness to Webster's International Dictionary, upon which I have (with the sanction of the proprietors of the copyright) largely relied in the English portion of this work as the standard dictionary authority of the English Language.

ENGLISH-IRISH DICTIONARY.

(FOCLÓIR BÉARLA-GAEÖILGE.)

A

A (1) *Δ*ιτμ (the pine tree), the first letter of the Irish alphabet. It has two sounds—one long like a in call or fall, as *ι*άν, full; *ά*ρσ, high; but in Don. and U. generally like a in far; and the other short like o in odd as mac, son; bac hindrance; *ς*άσ a withe; *α*νάμ, soul; *ς*ίλρ, green; and sometimes like a in fat as *α*βάρ say, speak; *α*νοίρ now; *α*μάρ from the west. At the end of words it is pronounced obscurely like a in tolerable, as *ο*έαντα, done (in Con. *ο*έανταί) *ε*άρτα, crucified and like u in full as *ο*έανρσ I will do; *ρ*ανρσ I will stay and similar futures. Before ο or ς followed by a broad vowel or by ι, μ, ν, ρ, ε or ς, α is pronounced like eye, except at the end of words of more than one syllable, where it is sounded like a in general, as *β*υλσάσ striking, in M. and S. Con.; in N. Con. oo in too; in U like short o; *ρ*εσάσ, a sin. Before μ, β, ι, ν and ς in monosyllables α is pronounced in M. and Con., like ow in how, as *α*μ, time *ς*άβα, a smith, *β*άι, a member, *ρ*άμ, weak, *μ*ανς, a bag; but in the North it has its short sound, except in the case of αβ, which is pronounced like ó, as *ς*άβάρ (*ς*όρ), a goat, but not always.

(2) In Irish α (short) has many significations:—(a) poss. pron., his, her, its, their. As his it aspirates consonants but does not affect vowels, as α ceann, his head; α anam, his soul; as her it does not affect consonants but prefixes n to vowels, as α ceann, her head; α hanam, her soul; as their it eclipses consonants and prefixes n- to vowels, as α *ς*ceann, their heads, α n-anam, their souls.

It is used (i) idiomatically in expressions of quantity, number, resemblance, etc., as 'n-α sonar, alone; his brother is dead and he is left alone, τά α *ο*εαρβ-*ρά*τάρ μαρβ *α*ςυρ τά *ρ*ερρεαν 'n-α sonar; it is no miracle at all νί *μ*ίορβάιτε έ, α *β*εας νό α *μ*όρ (*β*εας νά *μ*όρ, Con) give me half; of it, *τα*βάρ α *τε*ατ *ο*ομ-*ρ*α; its equal, α *ρ*άμáι.

(ii) With independent numerals and representing an as α *h*áon, one; α *ο*ó, two. In Con. an *ο*ó an τρί.

(iii) With verbal nouns to express state, condition, etc., as 'n-α *ρ*εαρám, standing (lit in his standing); 'n-a tōp̄t, silent; 'n-a lūge, lying; 'n-a fūn̄de, sitting; 'n-a cōtlaō, asleep.

(iv) Meaning his, their and used idiomatically with the verb to be, to express state or condition and to ascribe a predicate to its subject:—τὰ πέ 'n-a f̄ear, he is a man (not a boy); ῑr f̄ear é means he is a man (not a woman or anything else); ūi πέ 'n-a p̄is̄ f̄aōō, he was a king long ago; ūeīτ 'n-a m̄ac m̄nā p̄ōp̄ta, to be a legitimate child. Also with other verbs: ḡaōam̄ neam̄ aḡur̄ talaam̄ 'n-a f̄iaōnaib̄, I take heaven and earth as witnesses—P. and H., 2728.

(v) Instead of ōō, before verbal nouns to denote the subject in the case of intransitive verbs, as ῑr ḡnāc̄ac̄ ōōm̄-rā a ūeīτ m̄ar̄ p̄m̄, being in that condition is habitual with me; and the object in the case of transitive verbs, as bā m̄aīτ liom̄ a ōēanam̄, I would like to do it.

(b) rel. pron., who, which, that, that which, all that; (i) eclipsing consonants when it means all that, all who, &c., and asp. that which, as a ōtūḡ πέ t̄eīr, all that he brought with him; ā t̄uḡ πέ t̄eīr, which he brought with him; ā ōtām̄ḡ, all who came; ar̄ ā m̄b̄ioō ōēantā aḡe, on all that he used to have done—P. O'L. (ii) Aspirating in the active voice, as the man who strikes, an f̄ear ā ūaatear̄. (iii) Prefixing n- to vowels, there was a lie in all they used to say, ōō ūioō ūp̄éaḡ ī nḡaō̄ f̄ocaī ō'ā n-ab̄p̄arōīr; all that he says, an-ab̄p̄ann̄ pé; J.P.H. every word which they used to say, ḡaō̄ f̄ocaī ā ōear̄ōīr. J.P.H.

(iv) In the passive voice there is no change in consonants, as an f̄ear ā m̄oītaar̄, the man who is praised; but n is prefixed to vowels, as an f̄ear ā naōīacaō, the man who was buried, where a = ōō; ōō nōīaō an ōeoō. (v) Changed to ar̄ with past tense and meaning all who, all which, all that: ar̄ ā n̄oear̄narō πέ f̄eati, all on whom he worked treachery J.P.H.

(c) In place of the preposition i, in, as a-ūur̄, in this world, on this side; am' lām̄, in my hand; aō' ēporōe, in thy heart.

(d) As the sign of the vocative case aspirating ā f̄īr ūoīc̄t, Oh, poor man; ā ūean̄ ūoōc̄t, Oh, poor woman.

(e) As an auxiliary vowel after certain particles, as m̄ar̄ ā ūf̄uit̄ tū̄ anoir̄, where you are now.

(f) As ō, from, anoir̄, from below; anuar̄, from above; anatī from yonder or beyond; anoir̄, anroear̄, anīar̄, aōtuarō, from the east, south, west, north.

(g) In ar̄īr̄, ā c̄ioḡ, and before verbs it represents ōō.

There is no word in Irish for the indefinite article. It is always understood: īr̄ ceap̄c̄ ī, it is a hen.

Aback, ad., to the rear, backward, ḡcūl̄, f̄ā cūl̄, ar̄ ḡcūl̄, cūm̄ cūl̄, r̄iar̄.

Abaft, ad., towards the stern, ā r̄ḡaīf̄īr̄; ā ḡcūl̄; ar̄ a' ōtaōb̄ t̄iar̄; cūm̄ ōeīr̄ō.

Abandon, v.t. (1) t̄p̄éiḡm̄; -ean; -ḡm̄c̄; -ḡr̄m̄; ḡbeal̄ (u); v.t. (a) to abandon or quit absolutely, ōō t̄p̄éiḡ r̄ī é ḡo c̄iaon̄ ḡan̄ t̄aire: ōear̄ōōiḡḡīla, she wickedly abandoned him without pity—

B. O'H; (b) to forsake, ir maire a éirígear an duine gnáit ar duine dá éirí nó éirí (prov.), woe to him who abandons the old acquaintance for the new; (c) desert, ná tréig do capaio ar do cuio (prov.), do not desert your friend for thy portion:

Friend and worldly wealth will abandon you,

And so will child and wife.

Tréigfir do capaio asur do
maim faogail tú

Tréigfir do bean asur do clann féin tú.

(d) renounce, I will a—women and drink for ever (lit. till death), tréigfeadh go héas na mná 7 an toilacáin. (2) Séanaim-ad, v.t., ir oic féanao an éin a éirígear a héanlaic féin, bad is the abandonment of the bird who abandons its own young. (3) fásgaim (fásguaim), -úail, -áil, -aint. Uime rim fúigfir an feair a acair asur a mácair asur ceanglócar dá innaoi. (4) Cuim ruar do.

Appertain, baimm, v.n. baim, baint; I appertain or belong to; appertaining; also beanaim and buanimm, v.n. buan and buaimt (applied only to reaping in M.): ṣaó níó bamear do'n easlaír, everything that appertains to the church. (Note.—baimm is used in such a variety of ways by the old people that it might be convenient to set down here all of them I know.)

(1) Cut, dig, lift, strip, strike, as as baint féir, coirce nó móna, cutting hay, oats or turf; baim an ceann de, cut off its head; as baint pṛáaí, digging potatoes; baim ríao an cpoiceann de, they stripped the skin off it; baim ré an talam le n-a coir, he struck the ground with his foot; baim an clár de'n coircán, lift the lid off the pot.

(2) To strike violently or hastily against: lest thou dash thy foot against a stone, o'easla go mbainpeaó do coir le cloic (Ps. 91, 12).

(3) baimm, I take a thing unoffered, as opposed to ṣlacaim, I take a thing that is offered to me.

(4) baimm ar, I draw, take; baim deoó ar an tobair, take a drink out of the well (Or.); as baint camnte ar = "drawing" him out; bam ré gáiríde ar, it made him laugh (Or.); extract, remove from, derive from, as bam ré mórán cairíbe ar, he derived much benefit from it; bamtear a amm ar leabhar na beatha, let his name be removed from the Book of Life (K.). The word is used in some places for castrate, as bamr ar mucuib (O'D. Gram. 299); also to weaken: they weakened (took the substance out of) the milk by the amount of water put into it, bam riad an trurmaro ar an bannne le neart uirge (Or. prov.).

(5) Bamim . . . ar, (a) I take from; (b) I anticipate a person in taking a thing, as bam ré an rílling rim oim, he took that shilling from me, or he anticipated me in taking that shilling (which I hoped to have), sense very nearly=win, gain, overcame me in that affair (J. M. O'R.).

(6) Bamim = take, having the force of, happen, seize, overtake or come by chance: I cannot escape to the mountain lest some evil take me and I die, ní féadaim teicead fá'n ríad o'eagla uile éigin do buam dom 7 go bfuigim bár (Gen. 19, 19); what happened to him, cad a bam do.

(7) Move, pull, ring, as bam an cloig, pull the bell-rope (also =strike or ring the bell); as bamr turán nó turbeann, pulling weeds; as bamr uilirg, pulling sea-grass; bam an cloic rim ar an trige, move that stone out of the way; pull a hair of a peevish man's beard and see will he let it go with you (unpunished), bam ruibe ar féaróig imneán 7 féad an leigiró ré leat é.

(8) Bam oe, to cease, undo, unloose, let go your hold of a thing: let go the rope, bam oe'n téad; unloose your hold of me, bam oim (léig oam, Don.); I ceased to expect him, bam mé uil oe (Or.); he gave up expecting me, bam ré a fáil oim (J. P. H.).

(9) Bam oe, extort, remove, take off, undress, unvest, etc.: bam ré an rílling rim oim le mógairead, he took that shilling off (from) me through roguery; from us is ruthlessly extorted what you spend idly: ir oinne bamtear go cruadálac sad a scaitcear lib-re go oimadom; take off your shoes, bam oiot do bpoza; asur tárla an uair táinig lóreph cum a dearbáit-pead sur beanaoar a cota oe, and when Joseph came to his brothers they stripped him of his coat (Gen. 37, 23).

(10) See Belong, cá mbameann ré do'n baile reo, he does not belong to this town (Or.). Bam te, concerns, meddles with, pertains to, touches, interferes with, applies to or refers to: cá raib bamr aca do, they did not concern themselves about it; touch a peevish person and he will touch you, bam do imneán 7 bampró an imneán leat (Or. prov.); ná bam teir, do not meddle with or touch him; asur an méro bamear teir na daomib, and what concerns the people ar gnócaib a bam leó fém, on matters that concerned or pertained to themselves (Miam. p. 8), meddle not with married women, but make love to all the girls, (lit. make harvest among the girls), ná baim leir na mnáibh póirta ac d'éan fošmar imearf na scailin (Or.).

(11) Baimm amac, achieve; make out; secure: baim mé Cluara amac, I made out Clare Island (that is, by the "skin of my teeth") in a storm (J. M., O'R.); baim amac leat, make off! (Or.).

(12) Baimm amac, take possession of, exact, eke out: an breiríot a baim riad amac, the exorbitant interest they exacted (Keat.).

(13) Baimm, I win, succeed: the Arab won the race, baim an t-Arab an pára. [It is generally pronounced as if written baim (exactly = win) in Ulster, and always in Achill Island, J. M. O'R.; also in parts of M.] The mare will win or she will lose the bridle, baimpró an capall no cailpró rí an tprían (Ul. prov., 402 H. M.). [In U. capall = mare, gearmán = horse, láir being very rarely heard.] It is a bad third attempt that will not succeed; ir oic an tríomad iarraict nac mbaimpró (U. prov., H. M.); are you winning or losing? bfuil tú as baint no as cailleanamnt (Or. prov.).

(14) Baim mé amac 'n-a noiaró. I followed them that is shrewdly (in a sharp sense), ably, keeping well in possession of their movements, they were not going to elude me (J. M. O'R.).

(15) Baim faoi, to humble: baimpeap fút, you will be humbled (Or.); it is hard to humble a proud person, an áic a mbíonn rcpáic ir doilís as baint faoi (Or. prov.).

(16) As baint rmeap nó cnó, picking blackberries or nuts. See (1).

(17) An ceann do baint de'n rgeat, to make a clean breast of it, to own up.

(18) Baim pé ar i mbáir na bpáirgáí, he rushed off as fast as possible; baim ar, be off quickly.

(19) Níl don baint asam leir, I have nothing to do with him. See (10).

(20) Baim báir na cluairé díom mairá bfuil an fírmne asam, I assure you in all confidence it is true (lit. take off the tip of my ear if I have not got the truth). See (1).

(21) Baim pé amac ra scamnt, he warmed to his subject, commenced speaking rapidly.

(22) Baim pé áicir aram, he snubbed me.

(23) Asur meapball ar bit níor baim dó sur beannuis pé irteac, and nothing put him astray until he entered.

(24) Baim ocrap dó, he got hungry (m. b.).

(25) Baim re ppeab aram, he startled me, took a "rise" out of me.

(26) Baim pé a coméao beata ar, he got his livelihood from it.
